Another amazing before and after from the PFBC's Stream Habitat Section!

The PFBC and Western Pennsylvania Conservancy partnered to improve stream habitat, stabilize eroding banks and restore the riparian buffer on Spruce Creek, Huntingdon County.

The PFBC owns approximately 800 feet of stream frontage on Spruce Creek. The acquired property previously consisted of a parking lot, three house buildings and concrete wall structures. This section of Spruce Creek lacked in-stream habitat due to too much sedimentation and an over-widened and shallow channel.

Crews installed log cross vanes and log-framed deflectors to provide run and pool habitats, overhead cover and bank stabilization. The riparian zone was restored from the previous hard surface parking lot and buildings to 115 trees and shrubs and a wildflower pollinator garden.

PFBC Voluntary Wild Trout Permit and DEP Growing Greener funds were used for this project. Additional partners included Pennsylvania Department of Conservation and Natural Resources and Little Juniata River Association.
