

Where to Fish for Catfish

The good thing about catfish is that you can always find them close to home. Catfish are found in almost any water in Pennsylvania. This includes our big rivers, small rivers, creeks, streams, ponds and lakes. Here is a map with some hotspots for catfishing. Circle the hotspot that is the closest to your home.

Northwest Hotspots

- ★ Lake Arthur for channel catfish and bullheads (Butler County)
- ★ Pymatuning Reservoir for channel catfish and bullheads (Crawford County)
- ★ Shenango River Lake for channel catfish and bullheads (Mercer County)

Northcentral Hotspots

- ★ Foster Joseph Sayers Lake for bullhead and channel catfish (Centre County)
- ★ Curwensville Lake for bullheads (Clearfield County)

Northeast Hotspots

- ★ Lake Wallenpaupack for channel catfish (Pike County)
- ★ Susquehanna River (entire length) for channel catfish (all counties in the Northeast Region)
- ★ Francis Slocum State Park for white catfish (Luzerne County)
- ★ Briar Creek Lake for bullheads (Columbia County)

Southwest Hotspots

- ★ Allegheny, Ohio and Monongahela rivers for flathead and channel catfish (entire lengths)
- ★ High Point Lake for bullheads (Somerset County)
- ★ Yellow Creek Lake for bullheads (Indiana County)

Southcentral Hotspots

- ★ Susquehanna River around Long Level, Falmouth and Fort Hunter for channel catfish (York, Lancaster and Dauphin counties)
- ★ Raystown Lake for channel catfish, white catfish and bullheads (Huntingdon County)

Southeast Hotspots

- ★ Schuylkill River for channel, white and flathead catfish (entire length)
- ★ Blue Marsh Lake for channel catfish, bullheads and flathead catfish (Berks County)
- ★ Struble Lake for channel catfish (Chester County)